

Administrative Regulation Of Coal Mining by New Division Of Interstate Commerce Body

is Principal Recommendation of United States Coal Commission.

GRANTING CAR SERVICE

Or Withholding It the Means of Securing Regularity of Production and Preventing Scarcity and High Prices; Industry Must Reform.

Special to The Courier.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—In submitting its final report to the President and the Congress the United States Coal Commission "recommends the prompt action in its earlier report." These are summarized as follows:
"The coal-mining industry is not only one of the largest in our country, but its uninterrupted service is essential to the well-being of the whole people; the condition of this key industry affects directly and in large measure the prosperity of all American industry; the large public interest in coal raises fundamental questions touching the relation of private right to public welfare; but underlying these questions in economics and law are the issues of peace in the industry and justice to the individual—issues that strike deep into the heart of American institutions."
"An unrelenting supply of coal at the lowest prices consistent with just returns to mine workers and mine owners is what the public needs and can rightfully demand of the coal industry," the report declares. "It was to the coal industry that the nation turned in the hour of its greatest need, and it was to the coal industry that the nation turned in the hour of its greatest need, and it was to the coal industry that the nation turned in the hour of its greatest need."

Proceeding the commission the report deals very exhaustively with the importance of coal and its unrestricted supply. Ambassadors coal "ministers to health and comfort in several million homes," says the report. "But bituminous coal is the real foundation of that great industrial and transportation structure which enables more than 100,000,000 people to live in America."

U. S. Will Remain Unencumbered by Spoils—Coolidge

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—In his first public speech since becoming President, Calvin Coolidge today repeated his position upon two important topics—international affairs and farmer relief. Speaking at the opening session of the American Red Cross convention the President said: "That America will remain unencumbered by spoils, independent, unattached and unbought."
That the need of civilization is for an idealism that "does not seek to reform merely by an act of legislation, thinking that it can unload its burden on the government and be relieved from further efforts."
The President declared that the world is coming more and more to rely on moral force and less on physical. But idealism of human brotherhood and service "are idle dreams unless they can be translated to practical action," he said. "It is necessary on the one hand to avoid the illusions of the visionaries and on the other hand the indifference of the selfish."
"Each individual and each nation owes their first duty to themselves," he said.
His reference to those who would remedy conditions by an act of legislation and thus escape further personal responsibility was taken as a reference to those who are urging him to turn over to Congress the farmers' problem for settlement.
"Each individual and each nation," he repeated, "must work out their own destinies."

Moving 15 Times A Year Too Much

NEWSPAPER MEN HAVE BUSY TIME ON CANADIAN TOUR

Delegation Is Royally Entertained by International Paper Co.

Newspaper men of Western Pennsylvania were given a comprehensive insight into the manufacture of paper during three days last week they were guests of the International Paper Company on a tour of its operations in the Three Rivers District, province of Quebec, Canada. Included in the party was James J. Driscoll, president and general manager of The Courier Company.
The members of the party started from home Wednesday morning and returned Sunday. All of Thursday, Friday and Saturday was spent visiting the pulp and paper mills and in sightseeing. The visitors saw the wood coming in by boats on the St. Lawrence, inspected the huge pile of wood containing at this time 55,000 cords for the winter supply, watched the operation of the bark rolling drums which take the logs from the river and remove the bark and dirt, skim up the filter plant which furnishes 20,000,000 gallons of water daily for paper making process. They watched the huge grinders which make pulp of the wood. Thus the whole process of paper making was followed through to the shipping room. The four paper machines operated by the company produced 75 tons each daily.

OPPOSING FORCES LINE UP FOR CRISIS IN OKLAHOMA CITY

Legislators Determined to Assemble Wednesday to Impeach Governor.

WALTON STANDS FIRM

"There Shall Be No Meeting" Is the Announcement of Adjutant General Markham, Who Adds That His Soldiers Are Loyal; Floggings Cease.

By United Press.
OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 21.—Warnings against the assembling of more than two persons at the Oklahoma capitol, where the state legislature is scheduled to meet Wednesday to start impeachment proceedings against Governor Walton, were issued by the executive today.
"It will not be safe for more than two persons to assemble in a group in the capitol—a wrong impression might result in a serious situation," the governor said.
Walton announced he had turned the entire responsibility for preventing the legislature from meeting over to Adjutant General Markham, who is in charge of martial law enforcement in the governor's warfare on the Ku Klux Klan.
The military forces of the state of Oklahoma were marshalled today to prevent a "rump" session of the legislature. Legislators who have insisted they will meet Wednesday to impeach Governor Walton for usurpation of power in his fight on the Ku Klux Klan declared nothing could prevent the session. "But there will be no violence," W. B. McGehee, leader of the insurgent legislators, reiterated.
Adjutant General Baird Markham, who is personally in charge of troops gathered here to stop the proposed action against the governor, announced: "Governor Walton has told me there must be no meeting. There shall be none. My soldiers are loyal."
Oklahoma, for the first time in two years, has been free of floggings for an extended period since Governor Walton began his martial law program six weeks ago. Whippings had been almost nightly occurrences in some sections of the state, according to the governor's reporters, but since the first troops were sent to Tulsa, after a whipping there, not one case of mob action has been reported.
The governor apparently is ready to continue the military rule indefinitely. He announced that any time funds for the maintenance of troops were exhausted the guard could "go out and get whatever needed," indicated the troops could command supplies and provisions.
All Oklahoma waited expectantly for the attempt of the legislature, called to meet on Wednesday, to start impeachment proceedings against Walton. The governor has announced that he will treat the gathering of legislators as "any other mobbing of Ku Klux Klansmen" and order the military leaders to disperse and jail the members.
Representative McGehee, who is the chief agitator for a special impeachment session of the legislature, made public a decision given him by five leading attorneys of Oklahoma, whom he had asked for opinions on whether a meeting would be legal. All attorneys agreed the legislature had a right to convene without a call from the governor or any outside authority.
The governor has taken up the "story of Tulsa" which his chief advisor, Aldrich Binko, started before leaving the capital on a vacation.
Walton made public the testimony of J. M. Smithman, a negro, who was whipped by a masked mob because he had "registered negro voters as Democrats." Smithman testified that members of the mob cut off his right ear and attempted to force him to eat it.

Parental Consent Is Given at Dunbar for Immunization of 175 Children Against Diphtheria

Parental consent for treatment of 175 children of Dunbar and community with anti-diphtheria toxin was secured in a canvass under the direction of Miss Mary B. Allen, representative of the State Department of Health, which was completed last Friday and preparations are now under way for the first immunizing injection on Friday afternoon, September 28. This number is looked upon by Miss Allen and her aides as remarkable for a community of 1,600 people, and as indicating the people are alive to the dangers of diphtheria.
The anti-toxin will be administered at the quarters of the baby clinic, to which all mothers are asked to bring their children between 1 and 2 o'clock. Children of six months to six years were embraced in the canvass. The first treatment will be followed by two others on successive Fridays. All are free.
Dr. Don C. Fosselman will be assisted in the work by Miss Allen, the state nurse, and Miss Mary Friel, nurse for the American Manganese Manufacturing Company.

OCTOBER 26 DATE FOR HALLOWE'EN CARNIVAL HERE

Volunteer Fire Department Names Committee to Take Charge of Event.

BIG PARADE IS PLANNED

Number of Prizes to Be Awarded Will Be Determined by Money Raised in Canvass of City; Worth While Inducements for Bands to Take Part.

Hallowe'en will be celebrated in Connellsville on Friday evening, October 26.
The date, announced today, was set Thursday evening at a meeting of the West Side Volunteer Fire Department, under whose auspices the celebration will be held.
Although Hallowe'en does not come until several days later the local parade and celebration will be of the Friday evening type.
A committee on arrangements, composed of Harry Bowers, chairman, W. E. DeBolt and J. A. Cypher was named to complete the more important details. These men will have charge of collecting the money which will be offered as prizes and are also sending out the invitations to neighboring fire companies, fraternities and other organizations to attend and participate in the line of march.
The prize list depends on the amount of money the collecting committee is able to secure. The list will be drawn up at a meeting to be held on Thursday of the week preceding the celebration. The line of march and other features will also be settled upon at this time.
The Hallowe'en celebrations here have been growing with each succeeding year and Connellsville's method of a community entertainment is being followed in many other cities. Small contributions to the prize fund are all needed to make it successful.
The firemen took the proposition again this year when it appeared no other organization would volunteer to put it across. For the past several years the firemen have been endeavoring to unload the responsibility for the celebration but rather than see the city without it they have accepted the assignment.
The firemen are anxious to have several bands in the line-up this year and will offer worth-while prizes to participants. The firemen's band will participate but three or four others are also desired.

By United Press.

Stokes' Underworld Witnesses Admit They Lied Against Wife

By United Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 24.—After examining witnesses until early this morning, Assistant State Attorney Charles Wharton announced he would recommend that the charges of Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes that her millionaire husband had bribed underworld characters to testify she had lived among them, be "submitted to the grand jury."

Negroes who had worked in the Everleigh Club and other notorious resorts of 20 years ago and made out affidavits stating Mrs. Stokes had visited the places, confessed after hours of examination that their affidavits were untrue, Wharton announced. The witnesses also admitted having received money from a man named Joe Bruwer, described by Wharton as "Stokes' pay-off man."

Wharton later announced he would recommend the prosecution of Daniel Nugent, described as a New York attorney for Stokes. "I believe that crime has been committed and that prosecution should follow," Wharton said.

He will also attend the conference of governors at West Baden, Ind., on October 17, 18 and 19.

Mrs. Walter Ward Near Collapse

By United Press.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Beryl Curtis Ward was near collapse today after being called to the witness stand by the prosecution to testify against her husband who is on trial for the murder of Clarence Peters last year.

The witness had to be excused after a short examination because of her condition. She was helped from the witness box. It was a touching scene as Ward went forward to meet his wife to help her to her seat. After about two minutes, however, Mrs. Ward escaped to recover and after wiping her eyes showed an interest in the proceedings. Her testimony apparently developed nothing of importance for either side as only a few questions were asked having anything to do with points in the case already brought out.

WHITE LILY Your Protection Mark on Choice Hams and Bacon, and other Meat Products

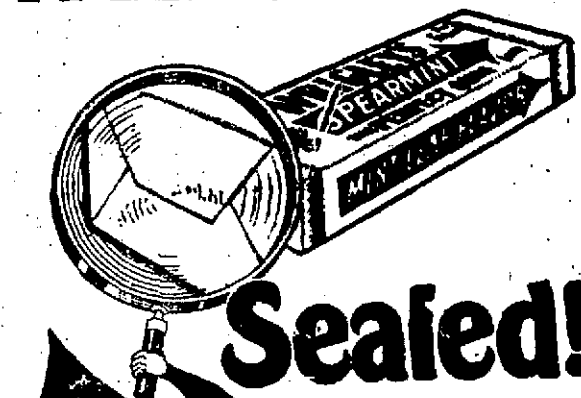

Ask Your Dealer about White Lily Hams

It will tell you it is the age and condition of the porker, the method of cure and smoking that make ham delicious; and all three of these points are carefully guarded in the production of White Lily Hams and Bacon. Only tender, cured, thin-skinned young porkers are bought; then the hams with their thin strip of fat are thoroughly cured and smoked in hickory smoke—and the hams are secretly treated so that they require no parboiling for frying. Make the best baked or boiled ham for sandwiches or cold cuts—tender, with fine grain and a flavor that only White Lily Hams have. Inspected and passed by U. S. Government inspectors before sold to the trade—if you are tired of disappointments, ask for a White Lily Ham from your dealer the next time.

OUR GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR BOY CHARACTER-BUILDING.

How great is there need for more occasions like that attending the presentation of the American Legion loving cup to Troop No. 6 of the Boy Scouts a few evenings ago! All too rare, indeed, are such opportunities for the older folk to meet with the boys of the city as a means for refreshing and enlarging the sympathies of the former and giving encouragement to the latter.

It would have been an inspiration to all adults of the city, as it was to those who were present, to have even casually observed the eager, clear-eyed, clean-minded boys while the program of exercises was being carried out. With the keenest interest, closest attention and with a feeling of modest and pardonable pride they followed the speakers of the evening as they commended in sincere and ardent terms the alertness, skill, clean sportsmanship and fine team work the boys of the troop had displayed in the contests that made them winners and final owners of the trophy.

In playing that game each boy has learned some of the fundamental truths which underlie the worthwhile successes in life, and he has learned these truths so well that he will not forget their significance and value or fail in applying them when, a few years hence, he will be promoted from a loyal Scout to a loyal citizen.

Valuable as was the occasion as an object lesson in what Scouting does for real boys, it was no less important in showing what a splendid opportunity is presented to the parents of the city and vicinity to get behind the Boy Scouts and give the movement such form and vigor of support that its advantages will be made available to every boy who desires, and others who need, to be brought under the helpful and gently restraining influences of this splendid organization.

Connellsville has the material out of which to form many more troops than are now in existence. It has among its young men, especially those who saw service during the World War, many who would make ideal scoutmasters if they could be brought to comprehend the genuine joy that comes from association with and leadership of a group of boys who are seeking wholesome companionship.

With the stimulus of active interest in behalf of Scouting such as it ought to be the pride of every parent to show, Connellsville would have a Scout Council membership numbering in the hundreds and a score or more of troops that would vie with each other, not only in winning trophies like that of which Troop No. 6 is the proud possessor, but in all the activities that go to make a real Scout and later develop real citizens.

In that happy event Connellsville would assume a new importance in the realm of Scouting and the trails and qualities of its citizens would be said to be to become a constant honor and credit, joy and satisfaction to the adults who in any way have contributed to making Scouting what it ought to be, and can be made, if we show proper interest and enthusiasm in this great character-building organization for boys.

Federal Aid for Road Building

Pittsburgh Post.

Of its own unaided efforts the commonwealth of Pennsylvania has constructed an admirable network of improved highways. Counties and smaller administrative units have also contributed to our system of good roads. Yet notwithstanding the vast amount of work that has been done and the money expended, there remains in the state thousands of miles of highway that are well-nigh impassable except in summer. Eventually we shall have all of the hard-surfaced roads that we require, but it will take years to get them.

An agreement has been made with the Federal government under the terms of which the United States will allot $2,988,892 for the improvement of highways in Pennsylvania during the fiscal year just begun, provided the commonwealth matches the appropriation dollar for dollar and sees to it that a stipulated proportion of the roads improved—nearly one-half—are arterials of interstate traffic. The terms are the same as have been offered to the others of the 34 states which are to receive Federal aid in road building this year. They are reasonable and will meet with the approval of Pennsylvania taxpayers. Travel by automobile has now reached a point which makes a system of interstate highways connecting all of the important towns of the country almost as much of a necessity as the railroad system. A survey just completed shows that on July 1 there were registered in the United States 18,948,188 motor cars and trucks, or one for every 2.1 persons in the country. Not a few of these vehicles are engaged regularly in interstate commerce. Bus and truck lines, operating between the larger cities, cross state boundary lines frequently. More and more traveling salesmen whose territory comprises several states are coming to use the automobile instead of the railroad train in covering their routes. Now if the individual states cooperated with one another in constructing and improving highways there would be no need for intervention on the part of the Federal government to insure that a satisfactory system of interstate roads was built and maintained. Unfortunately, however, the states cooperate only in the case of such important routes as the Lincoln Highway extending from coast to coast. Pittsburgh motorists are familiar with a much traveled road which is well paved in Pennsylvania but is in deplorable condition just across the boundary line in an adjoining state, and there are many such examples.

Here is where the United States bureau of roads can render good service. As the intermediary through whose agency the weak links in the interstate highways are strengthened it will accomplish much towards remedying such undesirable conditions as those cited. In view of the long journeys now made by automobile as a matter of course, the development of a highway system on a national plan has become indispensable.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Sept. 24.—Following the regular service yesterday morning at the Methodist Episcopal Church there was a business meeting at which time Rev. R. S. The proposition, in part given, was the sale of the present church property, for which there is a buyer, and also the mission on Shupe street, and that a site be bought at the Diamond and the church erected there. The present parsonage would not be disposed of, as was at first considered.

On Saturday evening a business meeting of the First Brethren congregation was held at which it was decided that instead of going in with another church, as had been the custom, and having a minister every other Sunday that it would have a full-time minister. ## New Fall Styles Are in Limelight

Coat Dress Among Leading Costumes Bidding for Popularity.

Just here and there in exclusive little shops, in smart restaurants, shaded by the hood of a handsome limousine, one sees suggestions of new styles. They are a relief, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, because we have had so much of the sameness of summer. We have grown tired, before it is really time that we should, of the things that have made the past fashion season a success.

Often, at this between-fashion time, some styles are launched which become, during the following months, quite the leading motifs. You see, at this time of year when new fashions are not crowding their way upon a woman's attention, she has time to think more carefully and to work out the why and wherefore of the becomingness of a certain garment or a hat or a pair of shoes. She has tested all of the vagaries of the current season and she knows by mid-season which of them came near satisfying her. Perhaps then she can perfect that most satisfactory one of all and try it out while she has time to ponder and develop until she has reached as near a conception of perfection as it is possible to achieve.

Let's take a glance at those newer styles which are making their appearance now. To begin with, the coat dress is surely going to be popular, and some of them are appearing in lightweight serges which have a certain style about them that is lovely to behold. They are simple wrap-around affairs, with every line of grace about them and with the very last degree of efficiency reached in their design. They hook with one large clasp over one hip. That is all the trouble they go to.

Building the Coat Dress.

A coat dress, when it is of the hand-somest variety, is lined throughout with satin or soft crepe. Its skirt folds over, one side above the other, leaving the under portion with as much stuff and so much fullness that it covers the figure completely. As for skirts, they are built wholly to suit the lines of the individual figure, though the tiered variety can be said to hold sway for those who are tall and slender enough either by nature or good corseting to allow them to stand in the center of the room.

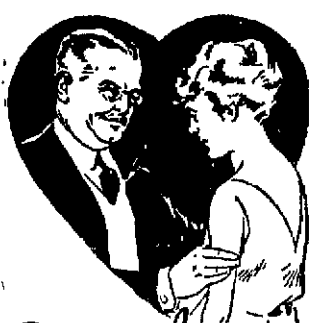

Then there are some coat dresses which have straight and quite tightly fitting skirts. Some of these are tucked in rows of tiny tucks horizontally and others of them use the same arrangement of pin tucks to extend perpendicularly. The collars on these dresses are usually of the shawl variety, folding in surplus fabric over a lace underbodice or showing under their rolling collar frills of coffee-colored lace that folds in interestingly with the line of the bodice section. The sleeves are fitted into armholes that follow the lines of the figure closely or else the armholes are squared off in that manner which has distinguished some of the best looking of the street frocks. Then, the sleeves extend in a fitted line to the wrists, at which point they are apt to flare slightly either by means of applied flounces matching those upon the skirt in many cases, or with shaped lower sections that merge into large pocket flares and extend again over the hands in quite tight cuff arrangements. But often the only divergence of the extreme straightness of the silhouette comes in the manner of shaping the cuffs to give that slight flare and interruption of the straightness of the line.

A most successful coat dress for the late summer is made of striped flannel, the wide stripes being cut to run crosswise of the garment. The dress is perfectly plain, closing at the side in a straight line to the hem where a white fannel turn-over collar does everything there is in the way of trimming with the exception of a repetition of the same idea. Flannel, indeed, is an extremely smart late summer material. It is one of those things that, early in the season, is tested by a few, found wholly satisfactory, and then, in mid-season, is developed to greater heights of accomplishment than had ever been conceived for it when the fabric first was launched upon the market.

Alpaca Has Gained Favor.
Alpaca is another of these new summer materials that has grown in favor through the hot months. It was launched in Paris in the spring, and the early reports from full showings of Parisian dressmakers seem to show that the stuff has, if anything, gained in favor. At any rate, there seems not the slightest chance that it will fall away in the opinion of either the dressmaker or the one who wears and tests the garment.

The dresses of heavy, flat crepe are the ones that hold the attention of the shopper just now. They come in so well for just this between-season wear and they are bound to last through a whole winter and into the following spring, at that one loudly and wisely chosen. The crepe is so soft and becoming in line that it will never cease to be a favorite with women who know how to dress really smartly and who know how to get the best effect out of the clothes they choose as their own. One crepe dress goes such a long way that it cannot be disregarded in the planning of a wardrobe, and usually there is no better time to invest in one than between summer and fall, when the designers' attention is just naturally given to this sort of thing.

Printed crepes, so say the cables from Paris, are to continue in favor with the couturiers over there. That is a signal, then, for us to go ahead and wear them with utter abandon, for they will be bound to last for several seasons more if they are well done and conform to the demands of the individual figure. One of these in a new design is in tones of tan and green, with spots of black scattered through the patterning. Then the

A hat has subtle charms to change the appearance of a dress and any woman who is essentially a good dresser and who knows clothes for what they are worth will never hesitate to put money into a hat at this time of the year.

ADDITION TO ART TREASURES

Finding of Portrait of Stradivarius.
Great Violin Maker, Has Stirred Collectors Everywhere.

A portrait of Stradivarius has been found. No picture of the great master had ever been identified and his face has remained a mystery for nearly 200 years. The portrait, which the experts who have so far examined it declare genuine, has come into the possession of a Cremona piano maker, who has always had the greatest interest in Stradivarius. He found the portrait in the possession of a certain professor, who had bought it from a Geneva antiquary but who kept its existence secret. The portrait, signed by the painter Gialdini, bears the name of the maestro and the date 1691. Stradivarius is portrayed as a stern Cremonese type, with flowing dark hair and flowing hair. He is shown holding one of his famous violins against his breast. The interior of the portrait corresponds to the contemporary descriptions of Stradivarius, none of which have been in harmony with various paintings which have wrongly been thought to represent the great violin maker.

Poisoned Children Sent on Auto Ride To Cover Up Crime

By United Press.

ELKHORN, Wis., Sept. 24.—Police today were investigating the past life of Mrs. Myrtle Schaud, aged 37, to see if additional poisoning might be laid at the door of the pretty widow, who, they said, had confessed to killing her husband with poison and attempting to do away with the four children in the same way.

Mrs. Schaud was arrested Sunday when she confessed she had attempted to induce her four children to eat candy in which she had placed strychnine. All except Ralph refused the candy after finding it tasted bitter. The boy is seriously ill in a hospital.

The district attorney's office said Mrs. Schaud had laid a careful plan to cover her crime. She gave the children the candy just as they were starting out in an automobile driven by the oldest boy, expecting he would lose control of the machine after eating the candy and that authorities would believe the children were killed in a wreck.

"Before I die,"

To endow "before I die" some sort of green place where little street urchins could play cricket, "before I die" was one of the dreams of Herbert Jenkins, London publisher. He began life at fifteen in a bookstall's shop. He and another boy used to sit up half the night devouring books. That boy was the poet, John Macfield. Walking to save a penny omnibus fare, refusing an invitation to a river picnic because of a strapless railroad fare, lunching on a bun—this is the picture of his early twenties, as he many times described it. In 1911, when he was about 36, his "Life of George Borrow" first brought him into public view. He has just died after building up a great publishing business.

MARCONI DEVELOPS PLAN TO SEND CHEAP MESSAGES

Minimum of Electrical Current Will Be Needed When New Waves Are Used.

Another great step in the development of wireless telegraphic transmission has been realized, says Senator Marconi, who has returned to London after a two months' experimental cruise in his yacht, according to a London dispatch. A system has been evolved by the Italian inventor whereby wireless messages are transmitted with a minimum of electrical power, and at very low cost.

"We have transmitted messages up to a distance of 2,250 miles, not only with a very much smaller amount of power and energy, but faster and more cheaply than with the ordinary system of long-distance wireless," said Senator Marconi.

"When the new system is adopted it will mean that a power station for long-distance work can be erected at much less cost than at present. I have telegraphed on this system from Capri Verde island, off the African coast, to London. To send messages clearly and more rapidly over these 2,500 miles took less power than a message from London to Paris by the ordinary method."

Senator Marconi explained that these advantages were gained by the utilization of waves that have not before been used. Given the necessary mechanical element, he said, messages could be sent clearly seven times faster than the present rate, and that the public and the newspapers ultimately would have the benefit of much cheaper commercial charges. His opinion is that wireless is only in its infancy, and that the future has in store greater marvels than have been revealed in the past.

Commenting on recent experiments conducted by American inventors looking to privacy in wireless telephonic conversation, Senator Marconi said he was afraid such an achievement was still far off. "I do not say that wireless telephony ever will be an absolutely private means of transmission, but I will say that in the future it will be possible to make it much more difficult for any one to get messages not intended for them."

MORE OPIUM USED IN CHINA

American Professor Says Greater Amount Is Being Consumed. China, under pressure of internal strife, has relapsed deeply into the tradition of narcotics, according to Rev. Dr. H. H. Gowen, professor of oriental languages and literature in the University of Washington, who has just returned to Seattle, Wash., from a tour of the Orient.

"Farmers in many districts have been practically forced to return to the cultivation of the poppy," said Dr. Gowen today, "because the military governors have assessed their lands on the basis of what they will produce in opium. Military governors in other districts are actually paying their soldiers in opium."

Not since 1907, when the powers made their first effort to relieve China from narcotics, has the habit of their use been so firmly fixed as now, according to experts interviewed by Dr. Gowen. He said that morphine had been introduced and was having an effect many times worse than that of opium, to which the Chinese had become accustomed.

REWRITING THE HOLY WORD

Dutch Historian Explains Why He Has Undertaken the Task—Makes Appeal to the Masses.

Fancy the nerve a man must have to suggest that our grand old Bible should be rewritten.

And yet Dr. Hendrick Willem van Loon, famous Dutch United States historian, has undertaken this task, very seriously and reverently indeed. He explains: "I firmly believe that 90 per cent of the world's Christian population never look at the Bible. After all, it contains nearly two million words, and much of it is written in a language which only the educated man can understand."

"My book, which I have called 'The Story of the Bible,' only contains 120,000 words, and the whole of it is written in the simplest language."

"In the States, and probably the whole world over, there are a large number of the working classes who want to learn. But until they find something that they can easily understand they are at a loss where to start."

"It is true that my way of retelling the old story may rob it of some of its charm, but I have tried to be reverent throughout, while all the time speaking in a language that is easily understandable."

"This work has taken me nearly two years and I have spent much labor and thought on it. I feel confident that the result will not only appeal to the masses, but it may induce them to study the Bible for themselves."—Exchange.

HABITS OF FALL WEBWORM

Explained by Official of United States Bureau of Entomology—Question of "Intelligence."

The familiar ugly brown-patched which appear on trees in the city, orchard and forest in the fall are the work of the fall webworm, whose habits and life history have been thoroughly studied by H. B. Snodgrass of the United States bureau of entomology. These little worms, which are the progeny of a small, night-flying white moth, construct bags of silken webbing among the foliage in the spring and begin to eat the leaves enclosed in their houses. As the leaves are consumed, the houses must be expanded to cover more food, until at length brown patches of several feet in extent appear in the trees. The author gives many interesting details of the life cycle of this little creature from the time the moth lays its eggs on a leaf, through its various stages of development as a worm, until it spins a cocoon and goes into confinement only to change to a pupa, then a chrysalis and finally emerges a full-fledged moth.

In concluding, the author speculates as to whether or not such insects have any so-called intelligence. "Can the caterpillars have appetites, a sense of touch, fear of danger, and show resentment at an interference with their natural rights without some consciousness at least of their own existence?"

What Insulin Is. Much has been said in the newspapers lately about "insulin," the new remedy for diabetes discovered by Dr. F. O. Banting, of Toronto University, but few people know exactly what it is.

Insulin is an extract of fresh, healthy beef pancreas, a solution of the internal secretion of the pancreas of the ox. The extract is made by soaking the fresh organ in a mixture of alcohol and diluted hydrochloric acid. One reason for choosing this solvent is that while it dissolves the internal secretion, the external secretion (whose chief constituent is trypsin and which is of no value in the present connection) is left undissolved. The solution so made is sterilized. Insulin has caused sugar varying in quantities from 2 to 7 grammes to be utilized in various patients per diem. The effect, apparently, is evanescent and lasts only eight or nine hours, so that injections are necessary every day.

Crossed Shoes Cure Cramps. My mother suffered at night with cramps in her feet and ankles. One day a sewing-woman told her that if she would cross her shoes when she took them off she would have no more trouble. My mother tried it, and we all laughed and teased her whenever we saw her little crossed shoes. Although she answered us that the cramps had departed. Some time afterward, in the upper berth of a sleeping car, I was seized with a violent cramp in my right foot. I was undressed and could not get down to go to the dressing-room, because it was early and people were walking about the aisle. Meantime the pain became unbearable. Suddenly I thought of crossing my shoes which lay near. I crossed them and the cramp magically disappeared. —Chicago Journal.

And After That. "Where have you been, old-timer?" inquired Culbert, upon meeting up with his friend Huffy. "Been to lobster beach?" "Down where the sea has a permanent wave, eh?" "Exactly."

"I suppose you were engaged to a summer girl?" "I was."

"There is a theory that summer girls are very fickle."

"Oh, I don't know," responded Huffy. "Mine stuck to me as long as I had money for rolling chairs and ice cream soda."

High School Loses Opener To Youngwood, 6-3; Trump Scores With A Drop-kick

Locals Fail to Make Touchdown Which Would Have Resulted in Victory.

BALL YARD FROM GOAL

The Connelville High School football team, with its 10 green and white players, played the Youngwood High School in the opening game of the season and lost, 6-3. The Cokers drew down the first rally by a drop kick in the first quarter when the second period had ended the visitors had forged ahead by a single touchdown. In spite of the fact that Youngwood is a small town it came here with an exceedingly big football team that gave a good account of itself. The Coker line did not develop the push and power it will have later on and this fact alone lost the game. With the ball one yard away from the goal line on a fourth down Connelville failed to push it over. The opportunity to win had been lost as the close of the game was only a few minutes away.

Youngwood received the kick-off and after making a first down lost the ball on a fumble. The locals punted and when the receiver fumbled as he was tackled Captain Enos fell on the ball. The ball was worked to the 18-yard line where the Youngwood defense stiffened and Trump sent a pretty drop-kick between the goal posts. On later attempts he had fine direction but the kicks were not hard enough.

Trump again kicked off for Connelville and after a series of plays Youngwood got away with a big run that carried the ball within a yard of the goal line. A visiting lineman had been offside on the play, however, and the ball was called back. Rushes by the strong backs carried the pigskin to within six yards of the goal line again, however, and just after the opening of the second quarter the ball was taken across. The play for a point after touchdown, a drop kick, failed.

The scoring ended there but there were numerous thrilling plays. Although George lost almost as much ground as he gained by being penalized and also by failing to get away from tacklers before he had gotten under way, he made two pretty dashes. On one he returned a punt 35 yards and to another instance he got away on the same kind of a play for 30 yards.

Joe May surprised his friends by his ability to go through the line with his head down. Trump did not have enough opportunities to show his stuff and he is to be shown more consideration. Captain Enos worked hard enough for three men. If his players follow their leaders example the Cokers will present a formidable fighting front. The guards were the weakest points Saturday but both men are green. They are willing, however, and are big enough to show something.

Although Youngwood defeated Connelville there is no particular disgrace in it, as practically everyone conceded the visiting team is far better than any which had represented the school for several years.

The day was rather warm for football but nevertheless the athletes went at their work hard throughout. A big crowd turned out for the clash, both from Connelville and Youngwood.

Next Saturday afternoon the High School team will play the Duquesne University High School team.

American League Record Held by Kid Elberfeld

Norman Elberfeld, while shortstop for Detroit during the American league season of 1901, had 12 assists in the second game of a double-header on Labor day.

No other shortstop has since had that number of assists in a single game and the "Kid," long retired from baseball as a major leaguer, has the satisfaction of holding a record for 22 years.

Tornadoes To Open On October 7

The Connelville "Blitz" Tornadoes will open their season this year on October 7. The first game will be with the Wabash eleven of Pittsburgh a strong aggregation, instead of the Hill Top Y. M. C. A.

It is also understood Paul Duggan, a former High School star, and "Butt" Bufano, a former Tornado, will return to the team this year. Games will be played on a spot just beyond the city limits in a field owned by Sam Joe, located on Limestone Hill.

Sidelights on the Opener.

Jim Wordley got away with a nice forward pass in the second half of the game but could not speed up enough to score. For a moment it looked as though he would get away but the tacklers overtook him.

Connelville shot another forward pass in the second quarter that was pretty. It netted a gain of 25 yards, going from Wilhelm in Stillwagon.

With one game behind them the Cokers now have something to go on and Coach Leroy will be busy this week correcting errors.

Following the game Saturday on substitute said he guessed he would quit—that he would never get a chance. This is his first year out and that statement alone demonstrated he has not learned half the game yet. It has not yet been found out that he isn't out there just for the primary purpose of getting into the game himself but to help the Connelville High School football team win. When he realizes that his presence at the practice field every night is doing this he will have begun to learn something. Later he will find that the benefit of this "sacrifice" is really perfecting him to a point where he will be more valuable when the time of need arises. It only takes eleven men to make a football team but it takes a good many more than that number to make a good one. It is the spirit of the game that counts—not just the participation.

Ray Welsh, playing for his first year, broke into the lineup in the final minutes, but did not get an opportunity to show his wares.

When Trump gets to carry the ball more it will be a simpler matter to determine his depth of capability.

The Cincinnati Reds, who defeated Brooklyn, 6-1 yesterday, still have a chance at the National League pennant. It is a slender one but there is room for the victory. The Pittsburgh Pirates by virtue of the clean-up by New York at Forbes Field last week are out of the race.

Dubbed "Lefty Allen"

Herbert Thormahlen, the Kansas City southpaw, is now "Lefty Allen" to his team mates.

It happened this way: In the box score of a game Thormahlen pitched in Toledo one of the Toledo papers named "Allen" as the Kansas City pitcher, and in the story Thormahlen was referred to as "Lefty Allen."

A young baseball writer was covering the game in the day-off absence of the regular baseball man. This young man evidently caught just a flash of the announcer's "Thormahlen" and, evidently not being familiar with the Kansas City pitcher just jotted the name down as "Allen."

So now it's "Lefty Allen" Thormahlen with his mates.

Mexico Has New Sport

Diversion in Pugilism

Mexico has a new sport diversion. It's nothing more or less than the noble art of fistfighting.

They've been frowning on bull fighting through the years in Mexico in official circles. At this time a wave equivalent to reform is sweeping over the country, and bull fighting once the joyous and gladdening sport is now more or less taboo.

Pugilism was introduced into Mexico some years ago, but it was not much of a success at that time. But now that the natives have lost their fondness for the bull fight, boxing is taking a rather firm hold, and with another year or two it is likely that some stellar matches will be held in Mexico City.

No Substitutes in French Rugby. In French rugby no substitutes are allowed, and, despite the roughness of the game it must finish with original players.

Outfielder Ross Young

Is Big Help to Giants

Ross Young, the Giant outfielder, is another one of those persons who go around carrying baseball bats on their shoulders and never let anyone know about it.

When Young hits—and he usually does—the Giants win ball games. When Young slumps, the Giants slump. It seems he steers their destiny and, inasmuch as they are leading by a safe margin, Young's power is easily calculated.

What he, Max Carey and a few other unheralded stars need is a good press agent who would spread their fame.

The Mason club has taken on Derney Astor to play the outfield while Langford is laid up with injuries.

Umpires sought to protect against the new-style knobby, corrugated bottles that the soda-pop bottlers are using.

Coming as Pitcher

Six Hits in One Game

Lifting six hits in one game is a batting feat. Few players have done it. One of these is Frank Brower of the Cleveland team, who did it a few days ago, playing against Washington. This feat has been done by Mike Donlin, Williams of the Baltimore Orioles, Danny Murphy of the Athletics, Harry of the old Cleveland team, Bobby Veach of the Tigers and Billy Nance of an old Detroit club.

All except Veach turned this cluster of hits in 1901 or 1902. Bobby Veach did it in 1928 in a 12-inning game.

Couldn't Pass Without

Looking at Dell's Nose

Sherry Magee, who's always good for an interesting yarn upon one that deserves mention. It seems as though Wheeler Dell has rolled Zeller faded off the planks when it comes to queerness in the shape of the nose.

"One day Dell was pitching against Boston and Eddie Fitzpatrick came up. He was a wonder, this Fitzpatrick. First ball Dell pitched Fitzpatrick crashed it back through the box on a line. Dell subconsciously stuck up his gloved hand to protect his face and the ball stuck.

"Dell stopped near first base and looked over at Dell. He shook his head and then pulled off the funniest remark I ever heard a player make by saying, 'By golly, Wheeler, I'm not surprised at all. Even a baseball couldn't pass you without stopping to look at your face!'"

Change of Scene Great

Help to Howard Ehmke

Howard Ehmke is one of the pitchers—a southpaw—who has been benched by a change of scene. With Detroit last year, he was no whit-bang but transferred to Boston, a city not intended to stimulate the best of baseball activities, he has done wonderful work. He has shown the American leaguer he is a good pitcher.

GENE SARAZEN MAKING PITCH SHOTS

In the photograph herewith Gene Sarazen is shown making a pitch shot to the green. The pictures show the proper stance, top of the stroke, hitting the ball and the finish.

Sarazen is young, takes the very best care of himself and has not permitted his great success to change the size of his hat. There is no nineteenth hole for Sarazen. When the game is over it is the showers, then the big feed for the present champion. None of the championship affairs resolve themselves into booze parties for Sarazen.

Gene takes the game seriously. He has already made a lot of money out of it and intends to make a great deal more. It is his livelihood, and he means to nurse it.

The very fact that Sarazen eight days after his recent operation for appendicitis was strutting around a golf course is proof of the excellent health that he enjoys. Sarazen looks like the one best bet to hold a high place in golfing circles for years to come.

THE PRINCE OF WALES, TRAVELING AS LORD RENFREW, SEEKS REST ON HIS "E. P. RANCH" IN ALBERTA, CANADA

When the Prince of Wales toured Canada in 1919, he purchased a 4,000 acre ranch in the beautiful rolling country of Southern Alberta about 25 miles from High River, located it with thoroughbred cattle, sheep and horses and determined to spend a vacation there at the earliest possible opportunity. This year the opportunity came and the prince, traveling as Lord Renfrew, left his plans to arrive in Quebec on the "Empress of France" Sept. 12 and spend half of September and all of October directing the management of the ranch, hunting, fishing and enjoying the varied activities of ranch life.

The prince chose himself Edward, Prince and the ranch is known as the "E. P. Ranch." His manager is Prof. W. L. Carlyle, a Canadian by birth who had been on the staff of the Agricultural College at Ames, Iowa, previous to entering the service of the prince. On the ranch are some of the finest race horses, Percherons, Clydesdales, beef and dairy cattle from the King's famous herds at Sandringham and Shropshire and Hampshire sheep from the Duke of Westminster's flocks that it was possible to get in the United Kingdom, and they have taken prices for the year in the greatest stock shows in both the United States and Canada. The prince is an enthusiastic breeder of cattle, sheep and horses, and is very well informed on the subject. He has already done much to aid in the development of Canada's live stock industry. Some of the thoroughbred cattle are now on loan to the University of Iowa. High River is 40 miles south of Calgary on the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the E. P. Ranch is in the heart of a great stock raising country. Cattle feed in the open all winter and thrive. To the west the Canadian Rockies lift their snow-capped peaks a mile above the blue waters of the Bow River.

Among the prince's neighbors are such well known ranch owners as the Earl of Minto, George Lane of the "Bar U Ranch" covering 62,000 acres and Guy Weadick of the "T. S. Ranch." There is nothing official about the prince's visit to Canada and that is why he is known as Lord Renfrew as he rides the range, participating in the round-up and breathes the pure air of the prairie "far from the madding crowd."

The Paramount

"THE SELF-MADE WIFE" a remarkable insight into the domestic controversy that can arise over the simple matter of living in a New York mansion with a million dollars to spend is offered in "The Self-Made Wife," the Universal all-star photoplay at the Paramount Theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The theme of the play is woven around the experiences of a young married couple who were getting along very well with best stew and with wearing apparel of gingham and flannel, but who quarrelled over the money and the proper dress when they could afford the finest in the land.

The story was written as a serial for the Saturday Evening Post and was later published as a novel. Effiebeth Alexander, popular fictionist and playwright is the author of the story. Jack Dillon, who directed Mary Pickford in "Sue" and who has directed many other popular screen plays directed the filming of "The Self-Made Wife."

In the cast are many well-known players, including Ethel Grey Terry and Crawford Kent, who have the leading roles. Phillips Smalley, Virginia Allen, Dorothy Cummings, Tom McGuire, Matthew Dow, Frank R. Duler, Laura LaVigne, Turner Savage, Honora Bentrice and Maurice Murphy.

The Soisson

"SLANDER THE WOMAN" On the second night in the forest above Truckee Cal. while the cast of "Slander the Woman" was gathered around a huge campfire enjoying the music from a phonograph which they brought with them. Director Allen Holubar noticed two gleaming points of light shooting out from the darkness.

The entire cast was gathered around the fire and without revealing his discovery to the other members, Mr. Holubar silently watched the gleaming lights slowly move closer and closer to the fire. Only the music and the crackling of the flames broke the stillness.

Finally the director solved what appeared to be a mystery. The points of light were the eyes of wild animals—mountain lions, bears, foxes and others that had been attracted by the music and a big fire. On the following night the fire was banked, so that it shed only a red glow before the music was started. This night the visitors arrived in the forest. During the three weeks to company was in the wilderness the animals made nightly visits, remaining until the music ceased, with never an attempt to molest the actors.

"Slander the Woman" starring Dorothy Phillips a story of the Canadian wife which was produced amid California snows and forests, is being shown at the Soisson Theatre for three days.

The Orpheum

"THE EXCITERS" Co-starring for the first time in their career, Bebe Daniels and Antonio Moreno appear in the principal roles of the Paramount production of "The Exciters" coming to the Orpheum today, Tuesday and Wednesday. This is a splendid picturization of a successful play by Martin Brown, adapted to the screen by John Colton and Sonya Levien and directed by Maurice Campbell.

Speaking of speed one would believe that even the modern mile would, at least for awhile be satisfied with but one means of excitement. But not so with Miss Daniels in the role of Ronnie Rand in this picture. Ronnie is a real speed girl in every sense of the word. Morning finds her out for a spin in her power launch, and with the afternoon comes a series of thrills in the air.

The close of the day means to Ronnie a delightful trip in one of her motors with the anticipation of a series of similar exploits on the following day. Pleasure is all that this girl has to think of. She has not a care in the world—that is, not until she finds herself married to a supposed crook bent on extorting from her family a goodly sum of money for an annulment of their marriage. The climax of this peculiar and interesting picture story happens. The Exciters as a picture almost alone in its class. The supporting company is wholly adequate.

The Arcade

At the Arcade Theatre this week the famous La Paradis Orchestra will be an added feature offering special concert jazz arrangements as this orchestra only jazz. These five symphonies with Dorothy Nell present a splendid program of jazz with the better class music, solos, instrumentally and vocally, together with trick playing, introducing America's immitable clarinet jazzologist and trick artist, Louis Munger. There is also "Zip" Asher-man, the eccentric dancing drummer and Vincent Sartinio, the cornetist who is noted for his famous horse laugh and "giggle." Mixed with syncopation of an unusual order, some really delightful musical selections will be rendered including a violin solo by Emmanuel Sanguis and "Dreamy Melody" played by Mr. Sartinio. Both of these are delightful renditions and well worth hearing while Miss Nell gives two splendid soprano solos. Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses" and "Wild Flowers." In addition the six McQuaides Kiddies will

Eustace Hignett looked up brightly, even beamingly. In the brief interval which had elapsed since Sam had seen him last an extraordinary transformation had taken place in this young man. His was a look that had disappeared. His eyes were bright. His face wore that beaming self-satisfied smile which you see in pictures advertising certain makes of face-mess underwear. If Eustace Hignett had been a full-page drawing in a magazine with "My dear fellow, I always wear Sigbee's Super-doo Featherweight!" printed underneath him; he could not have looked more pleased with himself.

"Hello!" he said. "I was wondering where you had got to."

"Never mind," said Sam coldly. "Where I had got to? Where did you get to, and why? You poor, miserable worm," he went on in a burst of generous indignation. "What have you to say for yourself? What do you mean by dashing away like that and killing my little entertainment?"

"Awfully sorry, old man. I hadn't foreseen the sign. I was bearing up tolerably well till I began to sniff the smoke. Then everything seemed to go black—I don't mean you, of course. You were black already—and I got the feeling that I simply must get on deck and drown myself."

"Well, why didn't you?" demanded Sam, with a strong sense of injury. "I might have forgiven you then. But to come down here and add that you singing."

A soft light came into Eustace Hignett's eyes.

"I want to tell you all about that," he said. "It's the most astonishing story. A miracle, you might almost call it. Makes you believe in Fate and all that sort of thing. A week ago I was on the Subway in New York."

He broke off while Sam cursed him, the Subway and the city of New York, in the older named.

"My dear chap, what is the matter?"

"What is the matter? Ha!"

"Something is the matter," persisted Eustace Hignett. "I can tell it by your manner. Something has happened to disturb and upset you. I know you so well that I can pierce the mask. What is it? Tell me."

"In, ha!"

"You surely can't still be brooding on that concert business? Why, that's all over. I take it that after my departure you made the most colossal ass of yourself, but why let that worry you? These things cannot affect one permanently."

"Can't they? Let me tell you that as a result of that concert my engagement is broken off."

Eustace sprang forward with outstretched hand.

"Not really? How splendid! Accept my congratulations! This is the finest thing that could possibly have happened. These are not idle words. As one who has been engaged to the girl himself, I speak feelingly. You are well out of it, Sam."

Sam thrust aside his hand. And it was his neck he might have clutched it eagerly, but he drew the line at shaking hands with Eustace Hignett.

"My heart is broken," he said with dignity.

"That feeling will pass, giving way to one of devout thankfulness. I know! I've been there. After all, . . . Wilhelmina Bennett . . . what is she? A rag and a bone and a hank of hair."

"She is nothing of the kind," said Sam, revolted.

"Fardon me," said Eustace firmly. "I speak as an expert. I know her and I repeat, she is a rag and a bone and a hank of hair."

"She is the only girl in the world, and owing to your idiotic behavior I have lost her."

"You speak of the only girl in the world," said Eustace blithely. "If you want to hear about the only girl in the world, I will tell you. A week ago I was in the Subway in New York."

"I'm going to bed," said Sam brusquely.

"All right. I'll tell you while you're undressing."

"I don't want to listen."

"A week ago," said Eustace Hignett, "I will ask you to picture me seated, after some difficulty, in a New York subway; I got into conversation with a girl with an elephant gun."

Sam revived his private combination service in order to include the elephant gun.

"She was my soul-mate," proceeded Eustace with quiet determination. "I didn't know it at the time, but she was. She had grave brown eyes, a wonderful personality, and this elephant gun. She was bringing the gun away from the downtown place where she had taken it to be mended."

souls were blended. Our beings have been pulled to one another from their deepest depths, saying, . . . There are your pajamas, over in the corner."

saying, "You are mine!" How could I forget her after that? Well, as I was saying, we parted. Little did I know that she was sailing on this very boat!

But just now she came to me as I watched on deck. . . .

"Did you write?" asked Sam with a flicker of moody interest.

"Certainly did."

"That's good!"

"But not for long."

"That's bad."

"She came to me and healed me. Sam, that girl is an angel!"

"Switch off the light when you're finished."

"She seemed to understand without a word how I was feeling. There are some situations which do not need words. She went away and returned with a mixture of some kind in a glass."

"I don't know what it was. It had Worcester sauce in it. She put it to my lips. She made me drink it. She said it was what her father always used in Africa for bull-calves with the stingers. Well, believe me or believe me not. . . . Are you asleep?"

"Yes."

"Believe me or believe me not, in under two minutes I was not merely freed from the nausea caused by your cigar; I was smoking myself! I was walking the deck with her without the slightest qualm. I was even able to look over the side from time to time and comment on the beauty of the moon on the water."

"I have said some mordant things about women since I came on board this boat. I withdrew them unreservedly. They still apply to girls like Wilhelmina Bennett, but I have ceased to include the whole sex in my remarks. Jane Hubbard has restored my faith in woman. Sam! Sam!"

"What?"

"I said that Jane Hubbard had restored my faith in woman."

"Oh, all right."

Eustace Hignett finished undressing and got into bed. With a soft smile on his face he switched off the light. There was a long silence, broken only by the distant purring of engines. At about twelve-thirty a voice came from the lower berth.

"Sam?"

"What is it now?"

"There is a sweet womanly strength about her, Sam. She was telling me she once killed a panther with a hat-pin."

Sam groaned and tossed on his mattress.

"Silence tell again."

"At least I think it was a panther," said Eustace Hignett, at a quarter past one. "Either a panther or a puma."

CHAPTER VIII

A week after the liner Atlantic had docked at Southampton, Sam Marlowe might have been observed—and was observed by various of the residents—sitting on a bench on the esplanade of that repellent watering-place, Bingley-on-the-Sea, in Sussex. All watering-places on the south coast of England are blots on the landscape, but, though I am aware that by saying it I shall offend the civic pride of some of the others, none are so peculiarly foul as Bingley-on-the-Sea. The asphalt on the Bingley esplanade is several degrees more depressing than the asphalt on other esplanades. The Swiss waiters at the Hotel Magnificent, where Sam was stopping, are in a class of bungling incompetence by themselves, the envy and despair of all the other Swiss waiters at all the other Hotels Magnificent along the coast. For dreariness of aspect Bingley-on-the-Sea stands alone. The very waves that break on the shingle seem to creep up the beach reluctantly, as if it revolted them to come to such a place.

Why, then, was Sam Marlowe visiting this ozone-sweet Gehenna? Why, with all the rest of England at his disposal, had he chosen to spend a week at breezy, blighted Bingley?

Simply because he had been disappointed in love. He had sought relief by slinking off alone to the most benighted spot he knew, in the same spirit as other men in similar circumstances had gone off to the Rockies to shoot grizzly bears.

To a certain extent the experiment had proved successful. If the Hotel Magnificent had not cured his agony, the service and the cooking there had at least done much to take his mind off it. His heart still ached, but he felt equal to going to London and seeing his father, which, of course, he ought to have done immediately upon his arrival in England.

He rose from his bench and, going back to the hotel to inquire about trains, observed a familiar figure in the lobby. Eustace Hignett was leaning over the counter, in conversation with the desk-clerk.

"Hello, Eustace!" said Sam.

"Hello, Sam!" said Eustace.

There was a brief silence. The conversational opening had been a little unfortunately chosen, for it reminded both men of a painful episode in their recent lives.

"What are you doing here?" asked Eustace.

"What are you doing here?" asked Sam.

"I came to see you," said Eustace, leading his cousin out of the lobby and onto the black esplanade. A fine rain had begun to fall, and Bingley looked, if possible, worse than ever. "I asked for you at your club, and they told me you had come down here."

"What did you want to see me about?"

"The fact is, old man, I'm in a bit of a hole."

"What's the matter?"

"It's a rather long story," said Eustace deprecatingly.

"Go ahead."

"I don't know where to begin."

"Have a dash at starting at the beginning."

Eustace stared gloomily at a stranded crab on the beach below. The crab stared gloomily back.

"Well, you remember my telling you about the girl I met on the boat?"

"Jane Hubbard?" said Eustace reverently. "Sam, I love that girl!"

"I know. You told me."

"But I didn't tell her. I tried to muster up the nerve, but we got to Southampton without my having closed. What a dashed difficult thing a proposal is to bring off, isn't it? I didn't bring it off, and it began to look to me as though I was in the soup."

And then she told me something which gave me an idea. She said the Bennetts had invited her to stay with them in the country when she got to England. Old Mr. Bennett and his pal Mortimer, Brenna's father, were trying to get a house somewhere which they could share. Only so far they had managed to find the house they wanted. When I heard that, I said, 'Ha!'

"You said what?" asked Sam.

"I said, 'Ha!'"

"Why?"

"Because I had an idea. Don't let me interrupt, old man, or you'll get me muddled. Where was I?"

"I don't know."

"I remember. I'd just got the idea I happened to know, you see, that Bennett and Mortimer were both frightfully keen on getting Windles for the summer, but my mother wouldn't hear of it and gave them both the misanthropist. It suddenly occurred to me that mother was going to be away in America all the summer, so why shouldn't I make a private deal, let them have the house, and make it a stipulation that I was to stay there to look after things? And, to cut a long story short, that's what I did."

"You let Windles?"

"Yes. Old Bennett was down on the dock at Southampton to meet Wilhelmina, and I fixed it up with him then and there. He was so bucked at the idea of getting the place that he didn't kick for a moment at the suggestion that I should stick at the house. Said he would be delighted to have me there, and wrote out a fat check on the spot. We hired a car and drove straight over—it's only twenty miles from Southampton, you know—and we've been there ever since. Bennett sent a wire to Mortimer, telling him to join us, and he came down next day."

He paused, and looked at Sam as though desiring comment. Sam had none to offer.

ADMINISTRATIVE REGULATION OF COAL MINING

Therefore, the report deduces, "the mining of coal in 20 states, its interstate transportation, and its country-wide distribution together make up a service indispensable to the general public. Shut down its coal mines and the whole country would soon be not only cold but idle and hungry."

Detailing the varied uses of coal in the daily life of the people and their dependence upon it as an essential commodity, the report says:

"This dependence upon coal is not only country-wide but all-embracing; every man, woman and child is the beneficiary of coal. So it is that absolute public necessity is back of the demand for continuous service from the coal mine and from every agency responsible for the transfer of coal from mine to place of use."

"The public welfare element in coal, then, is seen in the dependence of public health and safety on an unflinching supply of fuel, in the close connection between the prosperity of most industries and the uninterrupted operation of the coal mines, and in the obvious fact that without coal the great network of railroads which binds together this great country would be an idle, useless thing."

"It is the indispensable service which the coal mine performs that gives the furthest social value both to the property and to its product and in turn this social value in effect grants the public an interest in that use."

The commission expresses the opinion that "the first step toward protection of the public interest in the mining and marketing of coal as a continuous and efficient service is a better public understanding of the coal business."

"The government and the leaders of the coal industry," says the report, "both are blameworthy if the public has no proper conception of what coal means to the country, what conditions and handicaps have to be met in the mining and distribution of coal, what economies can be effected, what advance is needed and what can be done in bettering working conditions. On all of these subjects the public needs information and the industry needs publicity."

As a step in this direction the commission "heartily commends to the consideration of the industry" a plan for the collection and publicity of accounts on a voluntary basis submitted by J. G. Bryson of Somerset, president of the National Coal Association.

The first recommendation of the commission is "the use of the powers of the federal government over interstate commerce" for the purpose of "protecting the public and to promote the normal development of a great basic industry. The public includes investors in coal lands and properties, coal operators and miners, sales agents and retail dealers, as well as industrial and domestic consumers; only to protect the legitimate interests of the industry but to utilize to the fullest extent the good will and resources of the industry itself in putting to an end the disgraceful evils which have developed and which we have described."

Asserting that "the function of the government is that of supervision, with substantial powers of regulation," and citing the application of this principle to the railroads, the commission holds the view that this "characteristically American and constitutional method of dealing with such a national problem" should be applied to the coal industry. A means for such an application of the principle of regulation and administrative control, already exists in the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Coal Commission recommends the creation of a special division in that body for the purpose.

Asserting that "the regulation of commerce in coal among the several states involves the right to know the cost of production whether the investment on which a return is claimed is fairly estimated or inflated and what profits are made by owner, operator, and dealer, and what are the earnings and working conditions of the miners," the commission recommends the collection of "information concerning costs, sales realization, margins of profits, wage rates, earnings of miners, and a wide range of engineering and economic facts which are essential to the kind and degree of self regulation under government supervision," which the commission recommends. This publicity would include information as to the quality of coal, as well as to costs and profits, etc.

There should be coordination between the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Geological Survey and other bureaus in the collection of information, it being the Coal Commission's view that "the whole responsibility for the administrative correction of abuses, the regulative function, must be concentrated in one place."

"The government," says the report, "must go beyond continuous fact finding and publicity." In the case of anthracite, "the fundamental evil of which is that of monopoly," the suggestion is made that there be "limitation of margins to a reasonable return on legitimate investment and the elimination of monopoly profits." One remedy is "the levy of a graded tax on royalties and differential profits. The main remedy against extortionate prices," says the report, "lies in the consumer himself—the use of substitutes for hard coal."

Asserting that the fundamental evil in the raising and marketing of soft coal is "overdevelopment, irregularity of operation and consequent enforced idleness of miners and of invested capital," the commission is of the opinion that the problem can be solved, "through the granting and withholding of transportation service," for the purpose of "securing such regularity of production and storage as to prevent scarcity and high prices."

The definite recommendations by which the report is concluded are: That Congress make provision on a permanent basis for continuing the collection of coal facts.

That the long haul of coal be no longer encouraged by favoring rates, established without adequate regard to the cost of transportation service rendered.

Enacting law relating to government fuel lands should be amended so as to give the secretary of the interior full discretion as to the necessity for new mine developments.

Congress to designate an agency to unite with the coal industry in continuing studies of unemployment, rate structures, etc.

Unification of state mining laws, freeing inspection from politics; supervision of compensation insurance and safety education.

Urges cooperative effort in the industry as more effective than legislation to bring about reforms.

Touching labor relations the commission believes "common interest should lead both operators and the miners, through their organizations, to study the problem of unemployment and together seek to stabilize the industry; to study by joint committees the whole rate structure and its relations to the different jobs in the mines; and to perfect the machinery for settling disputes through conciliation or voluntary arbitration, with the adoption in the non-union fields of adequate checks on the exercise of the right to discharge. On the part of the operators we recommend that more attention be paid to the problem of labor adjustment. The success of many companies in establishing good relations warrants special attention to the training of foremen in management and to the centering of responsibility in labor relations. The operators also need more effective organization for labor relations and we recommend district and national labor commissioners, men of the highest type, who can work out a national labor policy. If the Sherman Anti-Trust law prevents the operators from combining together for the purpose of collective bargaining with the miners, which the commission does not believe is the case, then Congress should exempt them from the operation of the law for that purpose."

"The history of the past 30 years affords conclusive evidence that the United Mine workers of America has been the potent agency in the betterment of the miners' working and living conditions, and it is necessary today for the protection of the standards that have been attained. However, unless the union accepts in practice the principle that the public interest is superior to that of any monopolistic group, whether employers or employees, and gives satisfactory guarantees of a fair and orderly adjustment of controversies in other ways than by the exercise of economic force, the public will not view with sympathy the efforts of the union to extend itself over the whole field of the industry."
